

NSPG News Update, January 8, 2018

In May of 2017 we were pleased to report that Plasco Conversion Technologies Inc. (formerly known as Plasco Energy Group Inc., “Plasco”) had paid to NSPG the entirety of the accrued interest owing to us since Plasco’s emergence from the CCAA process.

Total interest and penalties paid to us was $1,014,991.

Our Promissory Note from Plasco was then in good standing as to all payments due, and the next interest payment of $781,815 was due at December 31st, 2017.

Plasco paid us this amount, in full and without deduction for payment in advance, on Tuesday, December 19th, thus maintaining the Promissory Note is good standing.

Plasco is now re-established financially and has exciting prospects for its technology.

“We are now ahead by $1.797 million since the CCAA process, through which we were a primary agent in saving the company assets that we and Mr. Bryden believed were needed to preserve and protect the technology and other intellectual property and to rebuild Plasco. The management team at Plasco is making steady and very impressive progress.” said Mr. Graeme Lowry, President of NSPG.

Receipt of this payment was a great way to end 2017 for NSPG, which was already a very strong year for us, as we detailed in our December Yearend Update.
